Aries

This ritual is for health, daily habits, and work.

Every great change in a life is made of small repeated acts, and tonight you are choosing which ones to keep.

PREPARATION

Face north. Clear the surface before you of anything unrelated to this moment — a tidy altar is a focused mind made visible. Silence your phone and let the room settle into itself. Pour a glass of warm tea, hold it between both palms, feel the heat travel into your hands before you take a single slow sip. Close your eyes and picture the version of your days you are calling in: the body that feels capable, the routine that holds you, the work that means something — let those images arrive with texture and weight. Open your eyes only when stillness has replaced urgency. The ritual begins now.

THE RITUAL

Set the red candle at the center of your space and light it slowly, watching the flame stabilize before you move on.

Hold the carnelian in your dominant hand and press it firmly against your solar plexus for three long breaths, feeling vitality and discipline move from the stone into your body.

Take a pinch of cinnamon and trace a small circle on the surface before your candle, drawing the boundary of the life you are tending — a body, a schedule, a vocation worth showing up for.

Speak aloud one habit you are releasing and one you are beginning, keeping your voice low and even, as though making a contract with the most honest part of yourself.

Place the carnelian inside the cinnamon circle and leave it there until the red candle has burned down or you choose to snuff it, sealing your intention in the quiet that follows.
