

FULL MOON IN PISCES · MONDAY, 4 SEPTEMBER 2028

Virgo

This ritual is for relationships, love, and close partnerships.

The full moon in Pisces does not demand perfection from love — it asks only that you stop pretending love requires it.

PREPARATION

Face west. Soften the room — dim any harsh lights, fold any laundry left out, and let the space feel as though it is making room for something tender. Silence your phone completely and let only the music remain. Pour a glass of wine or warm herbal tea, hold the cup between both palms before you drink, and let the first sip be slow. Close your eyes and picture the relationship this ritual is for — not an idealized version, but the real and layered thing — and feel where in your body that connection lives. Open your eyes only when you can hold both the beauty and the complexity of that bond without pulling away.

THE RITUAL

Light the brown candle and place it where both you and the flame can be still, letting its steady glow feel like the kind of presence that does not demand anything of you.

Hold the amethyst to your heart with one hand and place the other hand open on your lap, palm upward — this is the posture of someone who is ready to receive what a partnership in its fullest form can bring under this Pisces moon.

Roll a sprig of rosemary between your fingers and breathe its sharp, clarifying scent, letting it cut through any romantic fog and bring you back to the real, specific love you are tending or calling in.

Speak the name of the person — or the quality of partnership — you are working toward, directing it into the brown candle flame with your full attention and without softening what you mean.

Place the amethyst beside the rosemary in front of the candle, press one palm flat to the surface as though pressing a seal into wax, and extinguish the flame — what you have named tonight is now in motion.

YOU WILL NEED

brown candle

amethyst

rosemary

♪ chamber strings or soft piano, no lyrics