

FULL MOON IN CANCER · FRIDAY, 21 DECEMBER 2029

Virgo

This ritual is for friendships, community, and future goals.

Every great future is built at a table where more than one person sits — and tonight, under the full moon in Cancer, you are setting that table.

PREPARATION

Face south. Arrange your space so it feels slightly generous — a little more room, a little more warmth — as though you are making it welcoming not just for yourself but for what you are about to call in. Silence your phone, but let your chosen music rise softly, because tonight the atmosphere is one of gentle expansion. Pour yourself something communal and warm — wine shared in spirit, or a tea you might serve a dear friend — and hold it in both hands before sipping, feeling the generosity of the gesture. Close your eyes and picture your people: the faces in the room that matters, the community you want to inhabit, the future you can only build alongside others, and feel their presence there with you in the dark. Open your eyes when that warmth of connection is fully present in your chest. The ritual begins now.

THE RITUAL

Light the brown candle slowly and steadily, grounding tonight's work in the real and the lasting, not the fleeting, because the community you are calling in is built on something solid.

Roll a sprig of fresh or dried rosemary between your palms until the sharp, clean scent releases, then breathe it in deeply — clarity for the vision of who you want around you and what you want to build together.

Hold the amethyst to your temple for a long moment, eyes closed, and picture the future goal that requires other people to come true — the project, the movement, the simple belonging — in as much detail as you can gather.

Set the amethyst before the candle and speak aloud one name — a friend, a potential collaborator, a community you wish to enter — as an invitation, understanding that naming under the full moon carries genuine weight.

Place the rosemary beside the amethyst, lay both hands flat on the table, and let the Cancer moon confirm what you already sense: you are not meant to do this alone, and asking for company is not weakness but wisdom.

YOU WILL NEED

brown candle

amethyst

rosemary

♪ uplifting ambient or soft choral tones