

NEW MOON IN TAURUS · FRIDAY, 3 MAY 2030

Capricorn

This ritual is about romance, creativity, and the permission to feel joy.

There is a kind of seriousness that is really just fear in formal clothing, and the New Moon in Taurus has come tonight to ask you to take it off.

PREPARATION

Face south. Soften everything — soften the light, soften your shoulders, soften the idea that pleasure needs to be earned before it can be felt. Arrange your space with a touch of beauty — a folded cloth, a single object you find genuinely lovely — and let the doing of it be the first act of this ritual before the ritual officially begins. Pour yourself something you actually enjoy — wine, a good whisky, something warm and unhurried — and hold it for a moment before drinking as if you are making a toast to something you have been too serious about for too long. Close your eyes and let yourself picture something that brings you real, uncomplicated pleasure — a creative act in full flow, a romantic moment without pressure, a laugh that comes from somewhere below thought — and let your body respond to the image without commentary. Open your eyes when the picture makes something in you loosen just a little. Joy is not frivolous; it is structural.

THE RITUAL

Light the dark green candle and notice that its color is the color of living things at the height of their season — lush and unhurried — and let that be the first reminder that joy and creativity are in you like sap in a tree.

Hold the black tourmaline and feel its solid, grounding weight — this stone is here to do one thing only: to hold the practical world firmly so that you can set it down for the length of this ritual and simply create or desire without guilt.

Breathe in the scent of cypress — burn it, crush a sprig, open the oil — and let it fill the space with its clean, ancient, unhurried warmth, the scent of things that are allowed to grow tall.

Set the black tourmaline to the side of the dark green candle and name aloud the one creative act or romantic desire you have been postponing — not analyzing it, not planning it, just naming it as if it already has a place in your life.

Place your hand over your chest, feel your own heartbeat, and make one quiet promise to it — a small, specific act of joy or creation you will do before the next full moon — then seal the promise by lifting your glass and drinking to it.

YOU WILL NEED

dark green candle

black tourmaline

cypress

♪ gentle jazz or sensual acoustic strings