

NEW MOON IN ARIES · SUNDAY, 8 APRIL 2025

Gemini

This ritual is for friendships, community, and future goals.

The future is not a distant country — it is being built right now in the spaces between you and the people who see you clearly.

PREPARATION

Face south. Arrange the space before you with warmth — move things toward the center, away from edges, as though you are gathering rather than scattering. Silence your notifications, because the voices you are calling in tonight are the ones that matter far more than the ones in the feed. Pour a light, bright tea — lemon, mint, or a gentle green — hold the cup and feel its cheerful heat, take a slow sip and let it remind you that nourishment can be simple. Close your eyes and picture your people: faces you love, voices that have caught you, the future versions of gatherings not yet held, the shared goal that exists at the edge of what you can see but not yet fully name — hold all of it together like a handful of bright threads. Open your eyes only when you feel the warmth of that vision in your chest.

THE RITUAL

Light the yellow candle and let its brightness fill the near distance, holding in mind as the flame rises the names of the people whose presence makes your future feel possible.

Hold the citrine up briefly toward the candlelight so it catches and scatters gold, then press it to your heart and set one clear, specific future intention that is larger than yourself alone.

Crumble a pinch of lavender between your fingers and breathe it in deeply, letting its calm clarity open you to the kind of community that does not diminish you under this New Moon in Aries.

Speak aloud the name of one person you wish to draw closer and one goal you are ready to pursue without waiting for the perfect moment, letting your own voice in the quiet room make both feel suddenly, usefully real.

Place the citrine directly before the yellow candle, sprinkle the remaining lavender around it in a circle, and let this small bright altar stand as a living marker of the future you are actively choosing.
