

FULL MOON IN CANCER · SUNDAY, 13 JANUARY 2036

Pisces

This ritual is for romance, creativity, and joy.

Joy is not a reward that arrives after all the serious work is done — it is the current running beneath everything, and under this full moon in Cancer, you are finally letting yourself swim in it.

PREPARATION

Face south. Let the room become a little beautiful — move a flower, light something, drape something — because tonight is not about utility but about delight, and the space should reflect that. Silence your phone and let the jazz or the strings fill the room at a volume that feels like invitation rather than background. Pour yourself something you genuinely enjoy — a glass of something sparkling, a tea with honey and a slice of something sweet beside it — and hold it up for a moment, just for the pleasure of how it looks before you drink. Close your eyes and let yourself want something openly: the love affair, the finished painting, the afternoon that had no purpose but pleasure — picture it with all your senses and no apology. Open your eyes only when desire and readiness feel like the same thing. The ritual begins now.

THE RITUAL

Light the sea green candle with both the music and your full attention playing, and let the color of the flame against the green wax remind you that beauty is the whole point tonight, not a side effect.

Open a vial or crush a fresh sprig of jasmine and breathe it in deeply, letting the heady sweetness signal to every part of you that pleasure is permitted here, that the ritual is already working.

Hold the moonstone in your palm and tilt it slowly in the candlelight, watching the light shift inside it — this is what creativity does, this is what romance does, it changes what you see depending on the angle, and you are calling more of that luminous shifting into your waking life.

Set the moonstone down and spend five minutes doing something purely creative and unproductive: sketch something, hum something, write a single line of something that has no purpose but to be beautiful — and let the Cancer moon witness it.

When you are done, place the moonstone and a sprig or petal of jasmine beside the sea green candle and sit with the music a little longer than you planned, because lingering in joy is a practice, and tonight you are practicing.

YOU WILL NEED

sea green candle

moonstone

jasmine

♪ gentle jazz or sensual acoustic strings